Judge Taft, however, also held that subordinates enjoyed the right of free contract, the service being terminable at the option of either party, and that the court could not compel the enforcement of personal service against he will of either employer or employe. He declared on the other hand, that no man should leave his employment at a time or place where by so doing he would endanger life or property.

Chief Arthur's brotherhood cut article 12 completely from its by-laws, and railroad men perceived that the court was right.

This is shown clearly by the "Locomotive Engineers' Monthly," in its issue of September, 1908, in an article from which the following is an entire of the subspace of the section of the disease, requires a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment.
